

Milewide

Road Equipment

Milewide is the result of a design competition held by the Danish Road Directorate in 1998, in which HID won the 1st prize.

Milewide is a total concept of road equipment. Its components, ranging from signs to street lamps, are part of a homogenous and comprehensive design system.

The visual qualities are closely connected to the functionality and the system comprises a high degree of user-friendliness.

The masts are the central elements of the system, with the possibility of connecting several components on the same mast. The masts are developed to be permissive when hit by a car.

The system has been successfully tested on a series of roads in Denmark.
